

Rafting | Kayaking | Duration: 1 Day Days | Cost: $75

Nepal is second richest country in terms of water after Brazil and an obvious river-runners paradise. It offers some of the best conditions for rafting and kayaking. White water cascades from the mountains and, since some of the highest peaks in the world happen to be here, they give rise to some of the best rivers for rafting and Kayaking one could dream of. One need not necessarily be a professional or a thrill seeker to enjoy rafting or Kayaking in Nepal. The rivers of the country offer a wide range of possibilities. A day trip to Multi days expeditions can be arranged. A river journey is one of the most enjoyable and effective ways to experience the rural areas, observing different ways of life, culture and natural environments, and coming in to contact with village people the conventional traveler rarely gets to meet. These pleasures are complemented by an even greater thrill: running through powerful, fast-flowing rapids. Trishuli River The Trishuli River is Nepal's most popular rafting & Kayaking river and is easily accessible from Kathmandu, Pokhara or Chitwan National Park . It meanders close to the highway and is a perfect alternative means of transportation to the Royal Chitwan National Park or even Pokhara. Despite its close proximity to the road, the Trishuli River still offers great scenery, impressive gorges and exciting rapids. Note: On-Demand experience
